

Data Protection Policy

The Data Protection Act 1998 created new law about how organisations, such as R.R.E.C. Limited ('the Club'), can hold and use information. The data protection policy set out here and below describes Information and Activities which the Club and each of its Sections may undertake and perform during the life of each member (including any period after membership has ceased):

Information:

- Personal Details in respect of each member (meaning name, postal, e-mail and other addresses, telephone and facsimile numbers, and membership status); and
- Car Details in respect of each car under member's care or control or owned by them (car owners' names, country of residence and other details including chassis information, registration, body, former owners, history, photographic records and other information about the vehicle in the Club or in a Section's possession).

Activities:

- a. obtaining, holding, processing, using and disclosing Information in connection with:
 - administration, management and business activities of the Club or any Section, including making and keeping lists of members and members' cars and lists of Car Details by any means of identity;
 - research;
 - production and publication by any means of Club or Section bulletins, newsletters or other publications or material about the Club or Section, their members and/or cars including lists; and
 - releases and distribution of Information and other information held by virtue of the above activities, or in the Club or Section records, within and outside the European Economic Area to members, the Club, Sections, and car clubs and organisations interested in Rolls-Royce and Bentley cars;
- b. confirming to any third party whether or not any person is a member of the Club;
- c. providing Approved Organisations with lists of members' surnames and their membership numbers (an 'Approved Organisation' means a person, company, firm, or organisation offering or providing a service or goods to members under a Club-adopted scheme for the time being (e.g. Richardson Hosken and the Club's Car Insurance Scheme)) and
- d. anything ancillary or incidental to any of the foregoing.

NOTES:

1. The Club specifically forbids the use by members of members' personal and car details for any commercial use;
2. The Club will not use or disclose personal and car details for any purpose not described or referred to above or not incidental or ancillary to any such purpose, save as required by law.